The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Joerger is new naturalist for Brillion Nature Center

By David Nordby
The Brillion News

BRILLION – The Brillion Nature Center has a new naturalist and director. Brillion community, meet Danielle Joerger, who is settling into her role replacing longtime worker Louie Lecker.

Joerger interviewed for the position and says the nature center and Brillion made it a fitting role for her.

“I was definitely pleasantly surprised with how great this place is,” Joerger said.

Joerger, 32, grew up in Batavia, Ill., just 45 minutes outside the heart of Chicago’s downtown, but it was the outdoor life that she grew a passion for.

Joerger’s parents were outdoorsman.

“They would always encourage us to be outside as much as possible. We would go on bike rides, we would go kayaking, just kind of spending time out in nature, always with animals,” Joerger. “Anytime we got to see animals out in the wild, it was definitely fantastic. When I found out that I could make a living basically doing that, I was like, ‘absolutely,’ so I definitely took advantage of it.”

One of her first jobs was at Red Oak Nature Center, in Chicago’s western suburbs near Batavia, Aurora and Naperville.

“I fell in love with the teaching aspect and being outside and I’ve always loved nature in general, so that kind of led me to different areas,” Joerger said. “Very woody, so somewhat similar to what we’ve got here which is fantastic. It feels like I’m going back home.”

Joerger says that Wisconsin and Illinois aren’t too similar; she saw cornfields in the Illinois suburbs but didn’t see cows.

“There’s definitely a lot more cows, a lot more cheese but other than that it’s pretty similar,” Joerger says laughing.

Joerger was well-traveled between the two states. She earned a degree in biology and did research in Kirksville, Mo. for the Missouri Department of Conversation as the region’s assistant natural history biologist.

“It was an amazing, amazing experience,” Joerger said. The position was temporary, but it also didn’t have the teaching aspect that Joerger will have with Brillion’s youth.

“Definitely happy to be back doing that,” she said.

Her other roles included teaching marine sciences to ...

Stephany joins Brillion City Council

By David Nordby
The Brillion News

BRILLION – Those who have been in Brillion for a long time will recognize the newest alderperson on city council.

Kurt Stephany, a former part-time member of the Brillion Police Department, took his oath of office during last Tuesday’s reorganization meeting and had his first council meeting immediately after. He will also be on the library board and the finance committee.

“I don’t have any agenda. I don’t have any special topic. The biggest thing is ... I want to be educated on what’s going on,” Stephany said.

Stephany, who will be 43 next month, grew up in New Holstein and has lived in Brillion for four years. He was a part-time Brillion officer from 2011 to 2021 and a full-time officer in New Holstein.

“Throughout the last roughly

14, 15 years, just made a bunch of friends up here. Some of our family lives up here, so we just ended up coming up to Brillion,” Stephany said.

Stephany lives in the city with his wife of 18 years, Tracy. He has three children - Macy 21, Bell, 19, and Isaak, 15.

Back in 2011, Stephany spoke with Officer Ben Bastian and then-Chief Dan Alloy. He said he made friends through the department.

“People who became really good friends,” Stephany said. “Just bit by bit (I) started to build relationships with people here.”...
